Town operator fights to save baby duck

by Tamara Collins

A baby duck was found by a Town operator on Thursday morning, covered in oil and fighting for its life.

Tyrone Patten, Town Utility operator, opened up an inspection chamber located at the lagoon just outside Didsbury, on 15th Ave, and discovered a baby duck struggling to survive in a pool of oil.

"The duck must have been sucked up through the pipe," said Patten.

Patten ran and got a fishing net to pull the duck out of the mysterious oil. The duck was then transported to the Town Shop, where it was cleaned off, and it awaited a ride to the Vet Hospital in Madden.

At the Shop, the duck got its energy back, and remained wrapped in blankets, as suggested by a vet.

"I called on Friday to see how the duck was doing and they said it was doing very well," said Patten. "I then called again this morning (Monday), and found out the duck did not make it."

As for the oil the duck was found in, it is still not clear where it came from. The lagoon itself, is perfectly clean, and the inspection chamber is always locked.

"A couple years ago there was oil in the lagoon, and it was all cleaned out," said Chris McKenna, director of Operations. "We are thinking that maybe some oil was left in the pipes, and that is what we found."

The oil is expected to be cleaned up this week.

McCoy's Salers wins Reserve Grand Champion title

by Tamara Collins

Didsbury's own Alan McCoy took home the Reserve Grand Champion title, of the All Other Breeds Show, at this year's Calgary Stampede.

JAM Miss. Polled Naomi OIN, is the prized salers that won McCoy the winning title. To win this title, you must be in the top two in your class.

The other titles Naomi won are, First place in the Yearling Heifer Class, and the Junior champ in the females from all the Yearling and Heifer calves.

This was Naomi's first year competing in the Calgary Stampede.

"The competition in Calgary is very stiff," said Kathy Adams, manager of the Salers Association of Canada, located in Carstairs. "This year the numbers were down, but those who came out brought out their very best."

Naomi was born on Jan. 1, 2003.

"We are always very proud to have McCoy's animals out competing," said Adams. "They are always very nicely groomed."

Berreth refuses to give up his battle

By Shawne Mohl

For Dwayne Berreth watching the construction of the new Mountain View County administration building from his kitchen table is probably one of his worst nightmares come true, he says.

The Mountain View County resident who lives adjacent to the site of the planned new administration building has spent the last four months filling out paper work, attending court, and spending thousands of his own dollars in an effort to protect his livelihood, he says.

Berreth first submitted an appeal to the Mountain View County Subdivision and Development Appeal Board back in April to try to have the construction of the new building stopped.

His attempts, failed.

His request to the appeal board in April was denied, yet at that time the board added one condition to the County's building construction that they had to abide by.

The stipulation which was added, back in April, by the subdivision and appeal board states, "The applicant (the County) shall take or cause to be taken such steps as may be required to prevent silt and construction debris from entering Deadrick Coulee during the period of construction of the County Administration Building and the two Ancillary buildings."

Berreth at the time of the appeal says he had reason to believe that his coulee would become contaminated by construction debris, as well as once the building was constructed, by different chemicals and oils from vehicles sitting in the County's parking lot.

"It doesn't take that much oil to contaminate water," he stated back at the April 2, appeal hearing.

When his appeal was denied back in April he decided to take it past the local level.

He appealed the boards decision by taking it to the Court of Queen's Bench, where an August 10 ruling also denied Berreth's request to have the building construction halted.

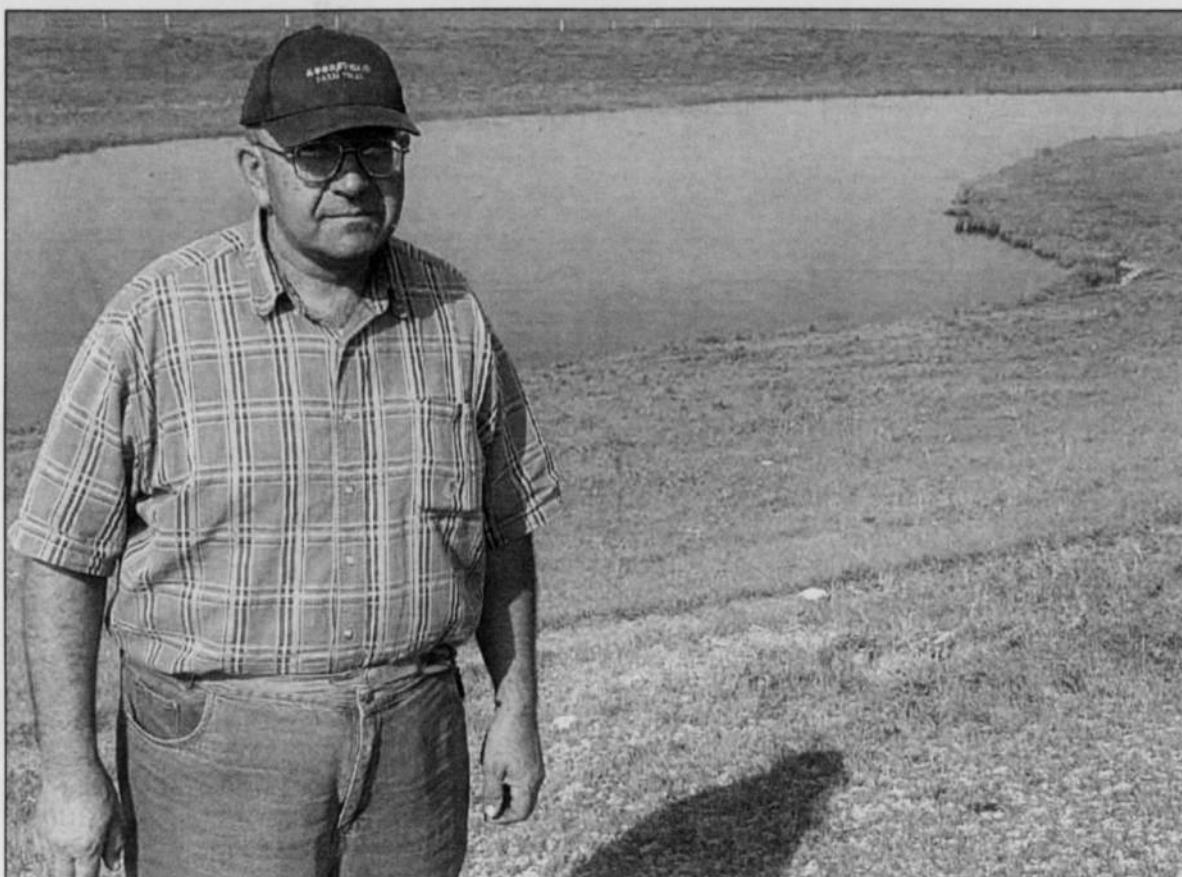

Berreth says he still isn't ready to give up his battle, just yet and is trying even further to have his appeal heard, yet again.

Berreth submitted, in writing, a letter to the County requesting, "that the Subdivision and Development Appeal Board of Mountain View County revoke Mountain View County's development permit for the new administration building."

Unfortunately, for Berreth second appearances are not allowed before the subdivision and development appeal board once a case has been closed.

"Once a decision is rendered then they are done with that case," explained the County's assistant commissioner, Tony Martens. "His (Berreth's) concerns should be revised and submitted to the planning department."

And, the planning department is exactly where Berreth

has taken his next step to his never ending battle with Mountain View County.

Last week, August 16, Berreth did take his concerns to the Municipal Planning Commission through a written letter.

In Berreth's letter to the MPC he states, "I have recorded evidence and testimony that I wish to present to the Subdivision and Development Appeal Board, which will confirm a breach."

The breach, which Berreth is talking about, is the condition that the appeal board put on the County stating, 'The applicant (MVC) shall take or cause to be taken, such steps as may be required to prevent silt and construction debris from entering Deadrick Coulee during the period of construction of the County Administration Building and the two Ancillary Buildings.'

Berreth, in an exclusive interview, stated that he along with other concerned residents went out and took pictures of his coulee being contaminated.

"We have pictures of the silt screens not being placed properly, causing materials to wash down into the coulee during heavy rains," Berreth said.

Berreth also pointed out in his letter, if the County is found guilty of breaching their conditions, they are in breach, also, of the conditions for the development permit which would then be a breach of the County's land use by-law 55/95.

Why Berreth won't give up!

Berreth took over his family farmstead from his parents.

A homestead which he was born and raised on, and one he says he is extremely proud of.

Since April Berreth has spent $5,300 on fighting the County. $300 of this was to submit his initial appeal and $5,000 is what it has cost him in legal bills to date.

Despite $5,300 sounding like a lot of money to most people, Berreth feels it's probably some of the best money he has - and ever will - spend.

"I feel that it's money well spent. If I can protect my property and my water supply, then it will be worth it," he said. "I have to live beside that thing for the rest of my life and I think that that's not right. I need to fight this, I said."

Besides the contamination of his dugout, which Berreth believes has happened, he says his future ground water supply is at risk.

"On a dry year I always experience a shortage of water," he said.

Berreth says that he doesn't actually see the construction of the administration building taking much of a toll on his water supply, but he says future developments could.

"It's what is going to follow that scares me," he said. "What about when they move the County shops out there."

It's the washing of the trucks and machinery that is going to use up gallons upon gallons of water. We don't have enough water now, as it is," Berreth said.

Martens says he can't comment on future developments, because he has to deal with the present. Currently the County has made no decisions to move the County shops out to the same location as the new administration building.

"This building won't be using much water. We are estimating less than one gallon per minute," Martens said, who added the County shops will stay where they currently are for the time being.

Since the County has allegations against them that they are contaminating Berreth's dugout, they have requested to be able to test the water.

Berreth has denied them their request.

Berreth says that back, prior to the leveling of the construction site, when his dugout was clear he had a verbal conversation with MVC's Reeve Ian Harvie and gave him permission to take a water sample.

"A water sample was never taken," Berreth recalls. "To me a verbal agreement is just as good as a written one."

At that time the County never took a water sample, but recently approached Berreth to take one. He refused.

"I refused because, they wanted to test the water after we had a heavy rain and all the silt had already run down into there."

It was already contaminated. How fair would that be to me?" Berreth said.

Martens says that it would have only been fair if accusations are being said against the County for a test to be done.

"If someone is going to claim we are contaminating their dugout... then let us come in to test the quality of the water," Martens said.

With Berreth's battle possibly coming to a dead-end, when asked what else he plans on doing he simply replied, "I don't know."

He says if the County won't listen to his concerns and look at his documented evidence then he may consider taking it to a Provincial level and presenting his case to Alberta Environment.

"I am only trying to protect myself, my land, and my livelihood," Berreth added.

Where does the MVTPA fit in?

Berreth says that the Mountain View Taxpayers Association, who have been rumored to have been egging Berreth on for this appeal, simply is not true.

"I talked to the taxpayers association before I applied. They gave me no opinion. They simply helped me with my application. Do you think the County would have actually helped me make my appeal? I don't think so," he said.

Berreth says that every dime that has been put forward for this appeal has been his own, and he has fought this case because it's what he believes is right and has nothing to do with the MVTPA.

"Every penny that has been spent on this appeal has come out of my account. No one else's - my account," he said.

As of press time there was no known response to Berreth's last letter.

What a weekend!

TAMARA COLLINS
EDITORIAL

When I think back to this past weekend, I am shaking my head in awe! I am so very impressed with how everything turned out, despite the disappointing weather.

Friday started off with a bit of rain, but it did not last. Thunder on the Prairies was very impressive, and I have heard nothing but positive feedback about it. To think, that this last minute decision turned out to be what it was, just think how great it will be next year with more planning and participation. We are already encouraging people to get involved, and come forward with ideas, or sponsorship to help this annual event really take off. Think of the possibilities.

There has been some talk, or should I say anonymous phone calls, from a women saying we are stealing this idea. First of all, I would like to say we are doing no such thing. We have given credit where credit is deserved, saying what a great idea it was that they came up with in the Crowsnest Pass. We are talking an event that brings in thousands of people, compared to a much smaller crowd here. The name is different, and the audience is different, and we are, if anything, giving Thunder in the Valley greater exposure. Instead of thinking of this negatively, why not support your own town, and help it blossom.

This was a fabulous weekend, the parade was amazing, and the rodeo left little to be desired.

Congratulations Ag. Society, for doing your town proud, and making this an unforgettable weekend.

No More Sticks and Stones: Bullying Can Be Stopped

by Stephen Novik

Schools have never been just about reading, writing and arithmetic—they are training grounds where children's social skills are developed and tested. Unfortunately, bullying is prevalent in many schools and has serious negative consequences for the perpetrator, the victim and the students who witness the bullying.

Twenty years ago, I was bullied. Although I was told to ignore what other kids said and did to me, I didn't. I retaliated. My fists challenged their words to see which had more lasting impact. I didn't believe the "sticks and stones" myth. Every teacher, counsellor or adult who intervened told me to turn and walk away but that was, at best, a band-aid solution. The bullying continued.

Now we know that bullying can be stopped. "By helping kids develop the right skills early, you can prevent bullying permanently," writes Janice Schroeder in the booklet Preschool Bullying: A Guide for Parents, published by the Alberta Teachers' Association.

According to Schroeder, bullying is learned aggressive behaviour that is persistent, intentional and directed at a particular victim. Schroeder notes that, "bullying occurs consistently between the same children with each consistently playing the same role—victim or aggressor." She also notes that one reason why bullying occurs is that adults tend to believe misconceptions about bullying, such as bullying "builds character" and "only boys bully."

The Alberta Teachers' Association provides anti-bullying resources for parents and students. The ATA's Safe and Caring Schools Project (SACS) was started in 1996 to address issues of safety and social responsibility in schools. Its goal is to encourage school practices that model and reinforce socially responsible and respectful behaviours so that learning and teaching can take place in a safe and caring environment. The SACS program is offered at all grade levels, though early intervention is key. Sue Sheffield, SACS spokesperson, says that "when correcting aggressive behaviour, the earlier, the better." Sheffield suggests telling children who engage in bullying that they weren't born as bullies and that they can change their behaviour with the right help from adults. Children who have been bullied need to be reassured that it's not their fault, and children who have witnessed bullying should be told that they can be a part of the solution if they speak up. "Silence is one more weapon we can take away from those who bully," Sheffield says.

Research shows that bullying diminishes one's ability to learn, concentrate, analyse and remember; lowers self-esteem; and can lead to depression, physical illness or, in extreme cases, suicide. And those who perpetrate bullying have their own negative outcomes to deal with. Students who bully often have higher high school drop-out rates. Adults who were bullies tend to have problems holding jobs and maintaining relationships, command less respect and often pass bullying behaviour on to their children.

In Your Child: Bully or Victim?, psychologist Peter Sheras has the following recommendations for victims and witnesses of bullying: ask the bully to stop, get help from friends or others, let adults know what is happening and tell adults if the bullying continues. Sheras also says that victims and witnesses should not fight back physically. I agree. Giving fat lips to those who bullied me didn't make me feel much better about myself, and I got into trouble. I even got suspended. I should have kept talking to adults until I found one who didn't say "Sticks and stones..."

Adults must recognize their role in solving bullying. By believing misconceptions about bullying, they condone it. Parents should talk to their children and assure them that bullying problems can and will be resolved. With the right intervention and knowledge, bullying can be stopped. It may have been a rite in the past, but it's not right anymore.

Wonderings of the heart

"Raising Children"

by Margaret Fradley

Raising small children these days seems to be one major or minor crises every day. Recently our daughter bought a small fish tank and purchased two gold fish, one for each child. Some time later, one of the goldfish died, and her little boy, who just turned 5, was mourning the death of his little fish. His mother wanted to know how he knew it was his fish that died. His answer was that his little sister, who just turned 3, had told him that her fish was alive, so he naturally assumed his had died. So their mother asked her little girl how she knew it was her brother's fish that had died, and without a moments hesitation she answered "well his fish looked sickly from the beginning." Now I ask you, how does one respond to that. Luckily Grandpa and Gramma are going up for a visit and we will shop for a healthy gold fish!!

On another occasion, my daughter decided to try an experiment that she had read was an interesting test just to see how different your children are. One morning after breakfast she told her two little ones they could each have a chocolate or they could wait until after supper and she would give them three. Her three year old immediately responded "I'll have mine now" - her five year old brother tried to encourage her to wait until after supper and she would get three, but to no avail. She ate her chocolate with gusto, then, after supper their mother gave her son his three chocolates. They fully expected the little girl to ask for one, and we know he would have immediately done so, he has such a tender heart, but no, she just said "I had mine this morning and it was good," we are all uniquely and specially created, each one for his or her purpose. What a blessing.

Tobacco the new currency of crime

Dear Editor,

Why is "Tobacco the new currency of crime"?

Two and a quarter centuries ago the reason was stated by Adam Smith "An injudicious tax offers a great temptation to smuggling."

In the 1990's "The raising of exorbitant taxes on cigarettes led to such an extent of smuggling that by the beginning of 1994 it was estimated that three out of every four cartons consumed in Quebec were illegal imports.

Governments were accordingly forced to cut tobacco taxes in such a drastic manner that a pack of cigarettes immediately fell by 45 percent within one month."

Federal and Provincial Governments have chosen to increase taxes once again. Due to actions taken in the past decade smuggling is unable to meet the demand this has created. As a result robbery and hijacking are increasing.

Rob Cunningham author of "Smoke and Mirrors The Canadian Tobacco War", a book advertised on Health Canada's website "TheFactsAboutTobacco" in stating "If the cigarette thefts continue, there's a chance someone is going to get hurt," is behind the times. Assaults and deaths have already occurred.

Be the aim of ever higher taxes raising more revenue or reducing consumption this must be recognized: more and more incidents of robbery and hijacking and attendant violence is the price being paid.

Yours truly,
Joe Hueglin

Lots to do around town

So it's Monday night, or Friday night, or Saturday afternoon, you're wandering around town with nothing to do, you're so bored. You wish you didn't have to pace up and down main street or hang out at a gas station. But this is Didsbury, it sucks, nothing to do...right? Wrong.

Skateboard clinics, dances, free access to a gym, movie nights, free swimming, mechanics workshops, art courses, homework help...there's so much for you to do. Pick your hobby, pick an

The health care recommendations of the Government's Committee on Strengthening Alberta's Role in Confederation would result in the creation of a destructive health care firewall between Alberta and the rest of Canada.

Yet we do not want a health care firewall between ourselves and the rest of Canada. Albertans strongly support Canada's public health care system. We want to be able to travel and move across Canada knowing that regardless of injury, accident or illness, Medicare is there to provide quality care at no personal cost. We also want to live secure in the knowledge that our family and friends across the country share this same Canadian birthright.

Albertans do not want to pull out of the Canada Health Act. Premier Klein received that message from his own caucus at the end of June when they shot down his proposal for two private for-profit hip replacement clinics.

It is time for the Alberta Government to be clear on where it stands on health care. Albertans are tired of the mixed messages they are receiving.

Last year our province stepped back from the national table by refusing to participate in the National Health Council. Earlier this spring Klein threatened to pull out of the Canada Health Act.

At the end of July, Klein joined his fellow premiers in calling on Ottawa to set up a national pharmacare program. Our premier agreed to upload the costs and coordination of public drug programs to the federal government.

Sincerely yours,
Harvey Voogd, Coordinator, Friends of Medicare

County Commissioner

ON THIS DAY.....June 11, 1924

COMPILED BY GLENDA HUNSPERGER
FOR THE DIDSURY MUSEUM &
HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Apparently, at one time, there was no place in Didsbury to buy alcohol! Today, we hear folks say 'it's cheaper to buy in the city'... well that wasn't true in 1924 when the price for a pint was the same here as in Calgary. I think at that time the only brewery in the area was the Calgary Brewery with their identifying trade mark being a buffalo head inside a horseshoe.

Rosebud Hotel Receives License

The long drouth of eight years which has caused those who like a glass of foaming beer, without making a criminal of themselves, to hang out their tongues has at last been broken and the Rosebud Hotel opened up on Tuesday noon with a line of draught and bottled beer.

Mrs. Harmer, the manager, states that the license was telegraphed down to them on Tuesday morning and the license itself arrived at Tuesday noon.

They are following the same procedure as in Calgary selling an 8 oz. glass of beer for 10c. The Rosebud has complied with all the government regulations in regard to selling and have fixed up a sitting room with tables where the old soft drink dispensary was established.

Now that the new order of the liquor business has been put into force it is a matter of both those who indulge and those who dispense it to observe the decencies and to be careful that they do not over indulge if they wish to preserve their liberties in this matter.

No hard liquors or malt liquors of any kind, outside of draught and bottled beer, can be obtained at the hotel. If anything else is wanted it will have to be obtained through the government vendors store either at Calgary or Red Deer and then only on a permit. The Rosebud is the only place in town that has a license.

Upset mother offers reward for answers

by Tamara Collins

What started out as a way for a 12 year old boy to make some money, has turned into a bad experience for one family.

Blake Shields, age 12, wanted to find a way to make some pocket money, so he decided to start delivering the Calgary Herald around Didsbury.

At the beginning of June he started his route, delivering the paper seven days a week.

"I thought this would be a great experience for him, and he would learn some responsibility at a young age," said Blake's mother J.C. Shields. "I never expected this."

On June 26th, Grad night in Didsbury, the Shields awoke to find the papers, that get dropped off in front of their house, scattered around the neighborhood, burnt, and some missing.

"I was shocked that someone would do this," said J.C. "The papers were everywhere, it took us a long time to clean up all the pieces."

To replace these papers, Blake had to use his own money.

"He was very upset about this, but he decided to keep going," said J.C.

On August 13th, the Shields awoke, once again, to find the papers scattered all over Westheights Drive, their street, some were burnt, and some missing.

"This just makes me so mad," said J.C. "I can not believe this is fun for people."

Again they spent the early morning hours cleaning up the mess, then went off to the store to replace the papers.

The RCMP were contacted, but still no one knows who is responsible for this.

"There were also beer cans scattered all over the road, as if this were a party," said J.C.

The Calgary Herald is going to reimburse Blake for the money spent on the extra papers, but this 12 year old is still upset someone is doing this for fun, without any consideration to others.

J.C. is not going to rest until this stops, and whoever is responsible is caught. She is now offering a reward for any information on these incidents.

"If you know anything please contact me," said J.C. "I can not explain to my son why this is happening, but I want to show him that there is a penalty for doing these bad things."

You can contact J.C. at 335-8585.

Putting for STARS

by Tamara Collins

Local golf tournament bringing together three neighbouring RCMP detachments to raise money for STARS Air Ambulance.

The Olds, Didsbury and Sundre RCMP detachments come together every year for their annual charity golf tournament.

This year the tournament will be held at the Carstairs Golf Club, and will be hosted by the Didsbury detachment.

This tournament is held not only to promote good relations between the police and the communities, but also to help out worthy charities.

"It is going to be a great time," said Didsbury RCMP Sgt. Tonn. "Already we are very pleased with the response from the community, as far as sponsorship, and with the quick response from golfers."

The event will be held on Sept. 9th, at 9 a.m. Every year the three detachments take turns organizing the event, this year is Didsbury's turn.

"This year all proceeds will go to STARS," said Sgt. Tonn.

"They save many lives annually with their prompt and efficient medical team, and the ability to land at almost any location to provide their services."

The cost per golfer is $65, which includes a power cart, a meal, 18 holes of golf and perhaps a prize.

Your support would be much appreciated, and will contribute to making this event a great success.

If you are interested in golfing, or donating money or prizes, you are urged to contact either Sgt. Tonn, or Cst. Patty Reid at the Didsbury detachment, 335-3382.

"There are very few spots left," said Sgt. Tonn. "So if you want to join the event, you must hurry."

In total they are expecting 144 golfers.

"It is going to be a great day," said Sgt. Tonn. "One you don't want to miss."

NEIGHBORHOOD

At The Kitchen Table

by Noreen Olson

On a long ago warm summer afternoon, mom tucked my baby sister Donna into her brown wicker carriage and wheeled her outside for some fresh air. I was eight and delegated to keep an eye on the buggy and report to mom when the baby woke up and needed attention. I took my job very seriously and when a neighbor stopped by and asked to see the baby I proudly lifted the net that was protecting her from flying insects and too much sun.

There was a spider in the buggy. It wasn't a particularly large or scary spider but it ran up the blanket toward the baby's face and I had a total, eight year old girl, fit. I think this was when I first realized that I feared and hated spiders.

Arachnophobia is one of the most common fears and there is a theory that it is rooted in the very beginning of our transition from sea creature to mammal. At about the same time that our ancestors were beginning to move onto the shore and stand erect, huge meat eating crabs were scuttling along the beach grabbing anything edible with their eight, ugly, hairy appendages. Leave your baby unattended for a minute and a crab would get him. Parents, especially mothers, found this extremely upsetting and the fear of crabs, and their spider look alikes, became part of our survival instinct.

I spent the rest of my farm childhood shrieking at spiders. Dad used to say there was no point in taking me picking saskatoons because if I did get a few in my pail I'd see a spider and throw the whole bucket into the air. Then we moved into town where spiders were less common and after a while I worked and lived in the City and almost forgot what a spider looked like.

We moved to the farm in 1962. This proved to be a peak year for spiders and spiders became my daily companions. They scuttled across the kitchen floor, ran out from under rugs, hung from curtains, dropped onto the furniture, clung to clothes brought in from the line, scurried out of the woodbox and colonized the cellar where they planned new forays into my living space. I was an emotional wreck and I sometimes wonder how our marriage survived. It was toughen up or get a divorce, and there were times when the decision hung in the balance.

I toughened up enough so that early this summer when I found, attached to my porch broom, a web with about three hundred newly hatched spiderlings in it I showed it to my grandson and blew gently on it so that he could see all the cute baby spiders move. What a total idiot I have become. Why didn't I RAID the whole mess when I had the chance? Within a few days the baby spiders had dispersed, but not very far. They all set up homes in the old neighborhood and great filmy webs filled the covered entry, all the east deck railings, inside and outside of the garage and the underside of the deck. The cute baby spiders grew into big, fat, ugly monsters that dangled just above the door, lurked in the deck rails and waited to fall on you as you opened the car door. They are, I think, orb spiders of which Alberta has about 25 species and these have to be the monster variety. Their bodies are as big as the ball of my index finger and their brown and black banded legs make them look even bigger. Thankfully they are slow moving and so my husband is able to sweep them away from the doors and out of the entry. I don't watch, just thinking about it makes me want to scream. I know they are not dangerous and I know they catch lots of the miserable gnats that have been coming right through the screen but they still strike fear in my heart and I don't want them near me. One advantage is that they are too big to sneak into the house, unless of course they can open the door themselves and they look big enough to do so.

"There is one other advantage Mom," my daughter told me, "you won't have to decorate for Halloween."

Thursday, September 2

The Didsbury Hospital Auxiliary will meet in the Assembly Room at 2:00 pm. New members always welcome.

This week we all say "goodbye" to Rev. Bob and Coline Bettson from St. Cyprian's Anglican Church and we all wish you well in your new posting in Calgary. I will miss our friendly and very informative telephone chats and hope I will "run into you" on your return visits to our fair town.

We, as a Town, got some excellent news for September. The railroad crossing on 20th Avenue, which is in such a horrible state of disrepair, will be replaced in mid-to-late September! There will be no trains going through for a few days while construction is ongoing.

The Didsbury Municipal Library will reopen Wednesday, September 1 after extensive renovations and a new coat of paint. Great job to all involved.

Transportation is available on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for doctors' appointments, banking, grocery shopping etc. by phoning the Lions Handi Bus at 507-0208. The bus is wheelchair accessible.

Aspen Ridge Lodge (soon to have the Grand Opening, more details later) has a list of new programs to start in September. Volunteers are needed, please contact Lori, Activity Coordinator and Recreation Therapist by phoning 335-9848, ext. 323.

Linda Lunt at Little Wonders Playschool for children ages 3 yrs. to 6 yrs., has just a few openings for morning and afternoon classes from Monday to Thursday inclusive, starting in September. Please phone Linda at 335-3806 to arrange for a visit.

CEF puts on Secret Agent Soccer Club

Have you someone in your household who's just crazy about soccer and likes to pretend he or she is from the movie Spy Kids?

If so, the latest summer club being offered through Christian Evangelical Fellowship (CEF) this week (August 23rd-27th) is perfect for them. It's called the Five Day Soccer Club and the theme this year is "Mission Possible".

"We've come up with a kind of secret agent theme this year for our club," explains CEF Office Administrator, Marlene Adrian. "There's going to be a lot of fun stuff for the kids to do...soccer, games, activities. It's all about teaching them how to be a special agent for Christ."

Each day of the Club beginning at 2:00 pm, organizers and children will meet at the West Hills Soccer Field for an enjoyable match of soccer. "The eight to 12-year-olds play from 2:00 pm - 3:00 pm while the five to eight-year-olds do games and then they switch," explains Adrian. Between 3:00 pm and 5:00 pm all the children gather together for games and activities focussing on the lesson for the day. "There will be memory verses that we will be looking at, but you might be hard-pressed to realize that this is a lesson because everything is in the form of a game or activity." An open soccer game for everyone is planned each day between 5:00 pm and 5:30 pm. "It may be that just the older children want to participate in this part because it might be too long a day for some of the younger ones...but definitely, everybody is encouraged to participate if they so choose." Anyone interested in joining the Five Day Soccer Club this year is encouraged to come out to the West Hills Soccer Field at 2:00 pm any day this week.

Please note: in the case of rain, the Club will be held at the old Missionary Church located next to the Post Office.

Local photographer finalist in International Competition

Deb Whitmore,
Photographer

Patience is a virtue any good photographer must live by and one that is reaping Deborah Whitmore recognition, recently, for her skills in an International Photo Competition.

Whitmore's close-up photo of a bee on a pussy willow is being selected in the semi-finals of a contest offered through the internet called picture.com. In addition, it has also already been chosen as one of the photos to be included in an anthology book being published this September.

"The photo was taken this spring in my neighbour's yard. I was actually trying to get a good shot of the pussy willow, but there were bees there at the time, so I just waited patiently until one landed on one," says Whitmore. "...It took a while, but I finally got what I thought was a pretty good shot at the time." Despite the attention and acclaim being garnered on Whitmore's photo, she insists the work is the result of her renewed interests in photography as a hobby. "I just took the picture because I love photography...I just got into it again recently when I bought a digital camera," explains Whitmore. "I got started in taking pictures in my first year of College and really liked it, but then put the camera away for a while after that and never really dabbled in it too much."

Whitmore says using a digital camera makes taking pictures easier because you don't have to go through the expense of getting photos developed at a drugstore. "It's a great way to go...especially when you're taking a whole bunch of shots and kind of experimenting with your camera. It's really working out well for me right now." Although nature shots are generally her preferred subject matter right now, Whitmore also enjoys taking pictures of her daughter. "They are mostly candids, though. I don't like posed pictures very much. I like the picture to look as real and natural as possible."

If Whitmore makes it through the semi-finals and wins her category in the international competition, she could come away with a substantial prize. "The annual Grand Prize is $10,000.00 and $1000.00 for each category prize. They should be making their selections sometime before the end of the year."

Anyone visiting the Bench Fair at this year's Fair and Roadeo may have seen Whitmore's photo. She entered it into the local competition on Friday.

Hockey registration coming soon

That nip you may be feeling in the air these days is more than a gentle reminder that school's about to start again, it's also a sure sign that hockey season is just around the corner.

With that in mind, this year's Annual Minor Hockey Registration Day is set to be held from 7:00 pm - 8:30 pm in the Multi-purpose Room at the Memorial Complex.

Didsbury Minor Hockey Association President, Gord Krebs, says any child between the ages of five and 18-years-old is invited to come down and see what this year has in store for their school sharp-shooter.

"Anything from Tykes to Pee Wees are being registered for that night," explains Krebs, adding, "We take boys or girls up to the Pee Wee level."

They play on mixed teams which seems to work out quite well."

One of the common misconceptions about hockey, according to Krebs, is that of extensive travel for out-of-town games. "Parents worry that they'll have to drive their kids all over the province to make it out to the games, but that's not necessarily the case. Kids under 12 have the option to travel solely within the County of Mountain View."

In the attempt to accommodate everyone's busy schedule, the Minor Hockey Association will be holding a second registration night on September 9th at 7:00pm. "That's the same night as our Annual General Meeting," says Krebs. "We are really looking forward to seeing some new people out this year who are willing to let their names stand for various positions we have coming open on the Board. Everyone's busy, but someone's got to do it..."

Anyone interested in volunteering their time as a coach is also encouraged to get involved.

Krebs adds that anyone interested in selling their old hockey equipment is welcome to do so at either of the registration nights.

For further information, or to volunteer, please contact Gord Krebs at 335-3519 or 335-3600.

Education issues return as holidays come to an end

by Nicole Phillips

With school just around the corner, many issues left unresolved last year are starting to emerge again.

Between provincial negotiations involving the Alberta Teachers' Association, the Alberta School Board Association and the provincial government; 2,000 new teachers coming into the province; and local concerns with utilities, the year is shaping up to be a busy one.

"Things will start to heat up as we get closer to the beginning of September," said CESD chairman Roy Brassard.

It has been reported that the Chinook's Edge School Division will hire between 10-12 new teachers for the school year.

"We don't know how many teachers we will be getting yet, but there are some coming. Right now we're communicating with our principals just to decide exactly where the needs are for this coming year," he said.

Brassard said the number of teachers for area schools is not known.

"It will depend a lot on each individual school, right now we're just in the evaluation stage," he said.

Hiring new teachers pleased local ATA #17 representative Bob Worsfold, who said "it's a very positive thing" for the schools.

At the end of June, the CESD lost 27 teacher positions - 13 teachers were laid off and 14 took early retirement packages. High utility costs were a key factor in the losses because they put a huge strain on the division's budget.

A letter was sent out to Sundre-area MLA Ty Lund at the end of June concerning the high utility costs, but Brassard said he hasn't seen a response from Lund yet.

"Our utilities are always an ongoing problem and a major concern for the budget," said Brassard.

"Heat and power are our biggest expenses for the school. We were hoping the government would cap them for us somehow, but that hasn't happened at this point," he said.

Turmoil between schools and the government isn't limited to utilities.

The drama between the Alberta Teachers' Association and the province has escalated once again, as talks are described by the ATA to be as "dead as a doo-doo."

The association is leav-

representative.

ing negotiation talks in the hands of Learning Minister Lyle Oberg, after hearing the government had no intentions of arriving at a long-term agreement, said ATA president, Frank Bruseker.

In a press release on Tuesday, Bruseker said the ATA "would no longer be actively pursuing efforts" to arrive at a long-term agreement with the province.

"This came as a surprise to me as I had anticipated reviewing the situation with Lyle Oberg following the cooling-off period that we had agreed to," Bruseker said.

Chinook's Edge School Division teachers' representative Worsfold says he too is disappointed with the Learning Minister.

"From the ATA's position, it's the Minister who has decided to make an announcement that the money for pensions has gone into classrooms," said Worsfold. "There wasn't enough money for both, which was not our understanding initially."

Oberg wanted the ATA to sign a 10-year contract, which would be the first of its kind, guaranteeing labour peace for a decade.

But the ATA didn't agree with the length of the contract, and the rights that the teachers would lose in the process.

It said from the start of the contract talks that 10 years was too long to sign on, and the teachers would prefer a five-year contract instead.

In return for the 10-year contract, the province would contribute $1.9 billion for the unfunded portion of the teachers' pensions, would put limits on class sizes and would have salary increases.

Chinook's Edge students haven't got as much to fear as many of their neighbours in the major cities.

Teachers in Edmonton and Calgary never reached an agreement to settle last year's contract, and have strike mandates ready and waiting for them in September.

"We'll just have to wait for the election and the new minister to maybe resume talks,"

Worsfold is hoping to have negotiations with CESD teachers done locally, even if the province and the ATA start talking again.

He said the provincial ATA has been involved in most of the bargaining, and the division would hope to get back to a "local bargaining scenario".

"We have requested to have local bargaining, but I don't know where we stand at this point," he said.

Teachers in Edmonton and Calgary never reached an agreement to settle last year's contract, and have strike mandates ready and waiting for them in September.

"We'll just have to wait for the election and the new minister to maybe resume talks,"

Worsfold says: "It would be nice if the minister would have a change of heart. It's in his hands."

This means it's back to the bargaining table for the CESD and its teachers.

Worsfold says talks will most likely start in the fall, since that's when their collective agreement - which was only settled in July - expires.

QUESTION: You have said that the natural progression of a marriage is to become more distant rather than more intimate. Why is that true?

DR. DOBSON: The natural tendency of everything in the universe is to move from order to disorder. If you buy a new car, it will steadily deteriorate from the day you drive it home. Your body is slowly aging and dying. Your house has to be repainted and repaired every few summers. A business that is not managed carefully will unravel and collapse. A brick that is placed on a vacant lot and left there long enough will eventually turn to dust.

Indeed, even the sun and all the stars are slowly burning themselves out. We are, in a manner of speaking, in a dying universe where everything that is not specifically being protected and upgraded is in a downward spiral.

The principle which governs this drift from order to disorder might be called "the law of disintegration." (Engineers and scientists sometimes call it the law of entropy.) The only way to postpone or temporarily combat its influence is to invest creative energy and intelligent design into that which is to be preserved.

Not so surprisingly, human relationships also conform to the principle of disintegration. The natural tendency is for husbands and wives to drift away from each other unless they work at staying together. To provide another analogy, it is as though they were sitting in separate rowboats on a choppy lake. If they don't paddle vigorously to stay in the same neighborhood, one will drift to the north of the lake and the other to the south. That is exactly what happens when marital partners get too busy or distracted to maintain their love. If they don't take the time for romantic activities and experiences that draw them together, something precious begins to slip away. It doesn't have to be that way, of course, but the currents of life will separate them unless efforts are made to remain together.

I wish every newly married couple knew about the law of disintegration and would actively protect their relationship from it.

QUESTION: You have said that children and young people are experiencing an epidemic of self-doubt and feelings of low self-esteem. Why do you think this is true?

DR. DOBSON: It has resulted, in part, from an unjust system of evaluating human worth that's now prevalent in our society. Not everyone is seen as worthy; not everyone is accepted. Instead, we reserve our praise and admiration for those who have been blessed from birth with the characteristics we value most highly. It is a vicious system, and we, as parents, must counterbalance its impact.

At the top of the list of the most highly respected and valued attributes in our culture is physical attractiveness. Those who happen to have it are often honored and even feared; those who do not may be disrespected and rejected through no fault of their own. This measure of human worth is evident from the earliest moments of life, when an attractive infant is considered more valuable than a homely one.

For this reason, it is not uncommon for a mother to be depressed shortly after the birth of her first baby. She had hoped to give birth to a beautiful, 6-week-old Gerber baby, having four front teeth and rosy, pink cheeks. Instead, they hand her a red, toothless, bald, prune-faced, screaming little individual who isn't exactly what Mom expected.

As the child grows, his or her value as a person will be assessed not only by parents, but also by those outside the home. Beauty contests offering scholarships and prizes for gorgeous babies are now common, as if the attractive child didn't already have enough advantages in life. What a distorted system for evaluating human worth. As author George Orwell has written, "All (people) are equal, but some (people) are more equal than others." The real tragedy today is how often this statement is proven true in the lives of our children.

Aqua Jets soar at Summer Games

Kirsten Kurtz, Danielle and Ashley Lappage.

by Tamara Collins

Alberta Summer Games is over, but it has left a lasting impression on three young local women.

Kirsten Kurtz, Didsbury, Danielle and Ashley Lappage, of Olds, all in the Didsbury Aqua Jets, won medals at the Games.

Kurtz came in fourth in the 50 meter Freestyle, sixth in the 100 meter Breaststroke, fourth in the 50 meter Breaststroke, and 13th in the 100 meter Backstroke.

Danielle placed eighth in 50 meter Fly, seventh in the 100 meter Fly, 14th in the 50 meter Freestyle, and 3rd in the 100 meter Backstroke.

"We met lots of new people," said Kurtz. "We had a great time there, it was a great experience."

Kurtz joined the Aqua Jets seven years ago, and after those seven years of practice, she was very excited to compete in the Games.

"I was surprised at how well I did," said

Danielle. "I took third (bronze medal) in the four times 50 meter Medley Relay, and fourth in the four times 50 meter Freestyle Relay.

"My next goal is to get a gold medal in Provincials," said Danielle.

The Games were held in the Okotoks/High River area, where the girls got to stay for three nights.

"I definitely want to compete in the Games next time," said Kurtz. "It was a lot of fun."

The Alberta Summer Games will take place again in 2006. The concept of the Games was initiated by the provincial government in 1974.

The Alberta Games began as a provincial movement for amateur sport, providing an opportunity for all Albertans to participate at the grass roots level.

The province was divided into 8 zones to ensure participation from every part of Alberta. The first Alberta Summer Games took place in Calgary in 1974, and they are held biannually.

In 1986, a new concept was adopted for the Alberta Summer and Winter Games. The emphasis switched to youth aged 12-17, the "developing athlete", zone games and zone camps assisted this development.

This year Didsbury had participants in swimming, in-line hockey, and field hockey.
